To Our Correspondents

He Didn't Know Us

T. R. Marshall, vice-president of the United States, passed through Mansfield over the Frisco Tuesday, enroute to Mountain Grove, where he lectured at the chautauqua. The train was met by the Mansfield Concert Band and a large number of our citizens. Mr. Marshall was requested to step on the platform during the train's stop here, but he ignored the same, and the crowd who had gathered to get a look at him had to be satisfied with a glimpse of him through the car window, since the window was not even raised.
Mountain Grove, Mo., Aug. 3, '15
Mr. W. A. Black,
Mansfield, Mo.
Dear Bro. Black:
Mr. Myers of the chautauqua management asks me to write you, expressing the regret of the vice-president that he was able to make such slight acknowledgment of the splendid ovation tendered him this morning by the good people of Mansfield. Mr. Marshall appreciates it very highly. His contract with the chautauqua company prohibits his public appearance except on their platforms, and this fact and a little bewilderment at the unexpected ovation will account for his seeming unresponsiveness.
He would be sorry to have Mansfield people think him ungrateful for the interest shown in him and the high office which he holds, and had his mission been a political one his actions would have been different.
Yours,
GEO. S. TOWNSEND.

They strengthen and invigorate the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally.
